Critical Congenital Heart Defects (CCHD) and Pulse Oximetry Screening

Motion Tolerant. Clinician Tested.

The Covidien Nellcor™ pulse oximetry portfolio facilitates quick, noninvasive screenings for CCHD. Since 1993, Nellcor™ pulse oximetry technology has been utilized on more than 33,000 newborns spanning five separate clinical studies evaluating the use of pulse oximetry as a tool in CCHD screening.

Covidien is the only company to receive FDA clearance for a motion-tolerant bedside pulse oximeter portfolio that is also compliant with ISO 80601-2-61 (International Organization for Standardization) standards for pulse oximetry.

The standard of care demands human breast milk. Your enteral system should work to preserve it.

5% of breast milk is fat, fat-soluble vitamins, and nutrients.¹ That 5% contains about half of the calories in human breast milk.² That’s why NeoMed focuses on the details that impact nutrition delivery.

We designed our Oral/Enteral Syringes:

• with a solid polypropylene plunger head that is flatter than rubber plunger tips, creating less surface for unwanted lipid/fat adhesion
• with an offset tip to ensure lipids are delivered first in a horizontally-oriented syringe infusion pump³
• to comply with best practice recommendations set forth by the Joint Commission and the FDA
• to interface seamlessly with our Enteral Safety System for optimal nutrition delivery and safety

Visit us at NANN in booth 424 to get your copy of NeoMed’s white paper, “How NICU Syringe Choice Can Reduce Fat Loss in Human Breast Milk.”
Welcome to the Family!

Medela is excited to welcome Acacia Neonatal to the family.

Now Medela can further support NICU parents and professionals by providing a cohesive enteral feeding system.
